New Zoo To Hold Grand Opening

The new Animal Land Zoological Park, located just off US-27 seven miles north of Grayling, will hold their grand opening this Friday. The new park which features over forty displays of live animals is owned and operated by Wesley Hunt and James Ackron Jr.

One of the big features at the park is the "Kiddie Land" where small children can play with and feed these animals without fear of injury. The larger "wild" animals, which might be termed as "ferocious" are accurately fenced to protect the public.

The new park will be open from 7 a. m. until 8 p. m. daily and displays at least one of every variety of Michigan animals plus a few tropical animals as well. The animals were purchased by the two owners in Michigan, Canada and Florida.

The Zoo layout includes an artificial stream bordered by a stone walk leading to the animal enclosures. There is a general cleanup job? ... one from 308 Railroad Reserve and one from 903 Vine.

Talking Taxes Getting To Be A Favorite Michigan Pastime

TALK ABOUT TAXES is a favorite Michigan pastime. Action on taxes is something else again. When the State Board of Equalization and the Tax Commission combined recently to hand local officials the power to levy an additional $5 million dollars in property taxes, the decision was firm only after heated activity.

An increase in state equalized valuation of nearly two and a half billion dollars was adopted.

The impact of the equalized valuation hike will be felt in three major ways: local units of government can increase property taxes; the state's share of school aid will be lowered by nearly eight million dollars; and the share of public relief paid by the state will be lowered in many counties.

A 1954 Supreme Court case said state equalized valuation was the only value for property that could be used for tax purposes.

That figure is arrived at in this way: local assessors set a value on property; the county then equalizes assessments of their separate districts to provide equitable and uniform sharing of the property tax burden with the county. Then the State Board of Equalization balances valuations among the counties to perform the same function on a state-wide basis.

Under the Constitution, counties can assess a tax no higher than 15 mills figured on state equalized valuation.

Although it is within their power, very few counties can be expected to lower the tax rate even though it applies to the higher valuation, the tax that property owners pay can be expected to go up.

At least part of the additional money local units get this way will have to go to a bigger share of school aid, however.

Under the state school aid formula, money from Michigan's general fund is used to bring the amount spent for each pupil in school up to a level set by the Legislature. Currently this level is $205 per pupil.

Local participation in school aid is determined by applying a factor called deductible millage to state equalized valuation. Deductible millage is currently 3.25. The higher the deductible millage, the more local units have to provide a greater share of school aid.

Some counties which had maintained a low valuation since the last general increase in state equalized valuation in 1956 were paying a very small share of school financing. This year's increase was expected to bring these counties back up to a more equitable share.

State aid for public relief works in much the same way. State law provides that counties (and the city of Detroit) pay 70 per cent of direct relief and the state pays the other 30 per cent. Policy of the State Social Welfare Commission permits the state to pay a share greater than 30 per cent under certain circumstances.

This can happen when the counties (and Detroit) pay more than a certain amount determined for each county by applying a millage factor to state equalized valuation.

Last year, six counties and Detroit reached a level of expenditure beyond which the state paid ALL their relief costs.

The effect of this was that in at least one county, the state paid 90 per cent of all direct relief for the entire year. That was in Keweenaw, where state equalized valuation was low and the relief rolls packed.

A SPECIAL SESSION of the 1960 Legislature looms as a virtual certainty.

Taxes are the reason for it, and chances are it won't come until after the people vote on the question of permitting a 1 per cent hike in the sales tax at the general election, November 8th.

The possibility of city income taxes, notably Detroit, has complicated the picture.

The state's fiscal picture seems to demand some wholesale reductions in services or new taxes. If the people vote to permit a hike in the sales tax up to 1 per cent, the Legislature presumably would vote an increase at the special session.

If voters turn down the increase, some other form of revenue-producing tax would have to be found.

MICHIGAN CITIZENS ARE travelers and a large number of out-of-state people come into the Water Wonderland each year as vacationists, visitors and just plain tourists.

Highway Commissioner John MacLean has selected a 50 per cent increase in tourist travel by 1962.

The state's new freeway system will be in full operation for the first time this year, and there will be a super-highway from the Ohio line to Sault Ste Marie in the Upper Peninsula.

Russia Still Lags . . .

An enormous amount of publicity — spurred in part by Premier Khrushchev's boasts, claims and statements — has been given to the Soviet Union's industrial progress, and to its plans for the future. A great many people, no doubt, now believe that Russia is rapidly catching up with us in the principal fields of production and may, in the comparatively near future, actually overtake and pass us.

In a long article featured in its May 2 issue, U. S. News & World Report attempts to assess the Soviet situation. And to put them into perspective. The material which the article is based comes from Soviet publications, U. S. government reports of various kinds, and various studies. No effort is made to minimize what Russia has done so far, or may do in the years ahead. However, the article says, as of now "Soviet Russia is a state of development about 30 years behind the United States."

A common measure of any country's economic strength is the gross national product — that is, the value of all goods and services it produces. Last year, the magazine tells us, Russia's GNP was about $200 billion. That was almost two and half times as much — $484 billion.

What this means is that "after financing his country's huge military establishment, the average Russian receives only about $430 worth of consumer goods and services per year, while the average American enjoys $1,770 a year — more than four times as much."

The article deals specifically with Russia's standard of living as compared with ours, in the production of a long list of essential items. It does this by stating Soviet production in each case, and then listing the year in which U. S. production was the equivalent. Going by this yardstick, Russia is 19 years behind in steel production; 30 years behind in oil production; 16 years behind in electric power production; 52 years behind in meat production; 18 years behind in milk production; and so on down the list.

These and other facts lead to an obvious question: "How, then, has Russia become such a great military power, able to frighten the rest of the world?" Here is what U. S. News says as to that: "Figures give part of the answer. The Soviet Union spends as much for arms, military forces and arms development as the U. S. spends on its military. Statistics, alone, however, do not reveal Russia's greatest military strength. That strength is a dictatorship that is able to regiment all the Soviet people to ruthlessness. Whatever is needed for the military is obtained by taking it from the civilian consumer."

There is another point of great importance that the article stresses. In some cases, Russia's production is when expressed in percentage only are greater than ours, for the simple reason that she started so much farther down the ladder. But, when the comparisons are made in total amount, we are ahead.

Summing up, U. S. News says: "Soviet achievements that have impressed the world are mostly in a few narrow fields — such as weapons and heavy industry — in ed by a ruthless dictatorship. "Outside these fields, the Soviet Union emerges as a backward nation — years behind the United States and far short of Khrushchev's boasts."

The Soviet military menace, then, is a very real thing, and only a fool would attempt to discount it. But the Russian economy, like the Russian standard of living, cannot begin to compare with ours, and will not in the foreseeable future.

Northern Michigan has been suffering heavier damages from forest fires so far this year than in the spring seasons of 1938 and 1939. A total of 340 forest fires was reported up to June 1st and the aggregate area burned over was 10,054 acres. In 1938 Michigan tallied 500 forest fires up to June 1st with 2,000 acres burned over. The record for the spring of 1939 shows 895 forest fires and a total of 8,000 acres burned over.

It was a "swell" job of painting of the elevated water tank, Alumnium, with "Grayling" lettered in black stands out attractively and clear. Just one suggestion we would like to make is that the City fathers add a beacon light from a staff on top of the tank for the convenience of visiting airplanes. The cost shouldn't be too much and the prestige it might afford would be great. Let's have an airplane beacon light at the top of the water tank.

Mrs. Marie Klock has resigned her position as bookkeeper at the Alford Hotel in garage.

The arrival of City Monday that was

No pavement could be stronger even if carved from solid rock!

Smooth-riding concrete on US-16 southwest of Portland

Where safety and dependability are vital...

Michigan motorists prefer CONCRETE highways!

Why are concrete pavements picked for major expressways? Because motorists prefer concrete for safety and dependability!

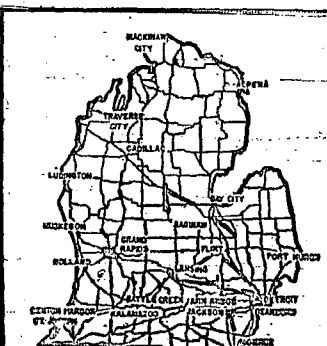

In fact, three out of every four Michigan motorists rate concrete safer — and a majority pick concrete routes when planning trips. They know that concrete's skid-resistant surface is effective wet or dry. They know, too, that at night, the better reflectance of concrete makes driving extra safe and so much easier.

When planning major highways, engineers count on concrete pavements being far more economical.

Concrete's longer life (double that of asphalt) combined with low construction cost and low upkeep make these highways real tax-savers.

Unlike experimental types of road surfacing, concrete has a proven record of capacity to carry even the heaviest traffic. Your smooth ride is there to stay, without frequent resurfacing or patching.

When you drive a new concrete highway, remember — road engineers and competent construction crews have built the finest pavement possible. For safety and dependability, there's no substitute for concrete.

Concrete highways are built in your area, make sure that concrete is the pavement.

Lovells Home Extension
On June 8th the last extension meeting until fall was held with the hostess, Tillie Doran. A surprise baby shower was given in honor of Leona Tubbs with a gift from the club and other friends. The table was decorated with a centerpiece of a carriage holding a bouquet of flowers and at each side a stork. Nut cups formed in the shape of diapers were placed at each place. Games were played with prizes going to the guest of honor. After a delicious lunch served by the hostess and co-hostess, Leona Tubbs and Hazel Koernke, all gathered for the silent auction which brought the club money for their Lansing trip. Mystery package was bought by Hazel Koernke. All enjoyed this social gathering. Reporter, Marjorie Harwood.

Actual operation of a sawmill before the eyes of visitors will be a feature of the first Annual GREAT LAKES FORESTRY EXPOSITION to be held June 11 at Kneeland, northeast of Mio.

Planning the move at the mill of Duane Bills, Mio, are County Agent Warren Cook (left, foreground) and Packaging Corporation of America Woods Superintendent Ivan Owen of Mio. The portable mill designed by Phil Hubbard of Mio will be set up at the festival site and the big circular blade will whine through Oscoda County sawlogs for the benefit of sightseers at the day-long event.

Sawing and chopping contests, tree planting and equipment demonstrations, log guessing and numerous other events plus "Paul Bunyan" lunches to be served by the Mio Lions Club promise to make the Saturday, June 11 event memorable.
